SKANDAL bugil di kamar mandi megawati bugil di kamar mandi Kamar Mandi Megi Megawati Bugil Di Abg Endut Berwajah Imut Bugil Pamer Bodi Sejak kecil, Megawati sudah kerap bersentuhan langsung dengan pahit dan manisnya dinamika politik. Wajar saja, ia merupakan puteri .Q: Using split together with base64_decode, how do I exclude a certain character? I'm using the Ruby gem base64_decode to decode a JSON object into an array. My problem is that, when I do that, it decodes the following character into a weird character that looks like a reversed (or something) tick. I've tried using the stripslashes function, with no luck. How do I get rid of this character? $response = HTTParty.post(API_URL, body) $response_data = JSON.parse(base64_decode($response.body)) Thanks a lot A: Generally speaking, this is a result of a decoding problem, not a base64_decode problem. The btoa/base64 encode/decode specification clearly states that any non-ascii character must be encoded with a special format called uuencode. If you remove all non-ascii characters, I think you won't get this problem. Alternatively, if this is an actual response from a JSON response, you are probably better off parsing the JSON, rather than base64-encoding it, since the JSON parser can interpret all the characters. Q: MySQL, queries on foreign keys I have a table member: mysql> desc member Field Type -----
----- id
