Technical Field The present disclosure relates to a method of fabricating an integrated circuit structure and, more particularly, to a method of fabricating an integrated circuit structure with a bonding pad. 2. Description of Related Art Nowadays, semiconductor manufacturers are required to fabricate smaller and smaller integrated circuits (IC) devices. However, conventional IC fabrication processes are limited in reducing the length of the bonding pad, which is an interval between a bonding pad and a conductive line. As such, an effective electrical connection between the bonding pad and the conductive line is not ensured. In order to deal with the problem, semiconductor manufacturers develop a technology to deposit a conductive line over a structure. For example, a conventional method deposits a metal layer on a dielectric layer that covers the structure. However, this method still has many drawbacks. For example, when the metal line is formed by a chemical-vapor deposition process, the dielectric layer must be a porous layer to be able to sustain a sufficient amount of the chemical-vapor deposition process. On the other hand, if the dielectric layer is a non-porous dielectric layer, metal atoms will diffuse from the metal layer to the dielectric layer and degrade the performance of the electronic device formed by the dielectric layer. Furthermore, to avoid damage caused by the chemical-vapor deposition process, the thickness of the dielectric layer must be controlled to be smaller than a thickness of the porous layer. Therefore, there is a need to provide a method of fabricating an integrated circuit structure with a bonding pad to solve the problems in the prior art.Q: Javascript - variable scope for functions I would like to understand how function scope works in JavaScript. I have a class that does something really simple, but I cannot grasp how the variable "parts" is accessible from other functions. var Parts = function() { var parts = []; var init = function() { // load big file parts.push([]); };
